3 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

JURY CHOSEN FOR TRIAL OF BUNDY BROTHERS, OTHERS FOR STANDOFF

The trial of seven anti-government activists, including ranchers Ammon and Ryan Bundy, for leading an armed takeover of a federal wildlife refuge in Oregon was set to begin on Wednesday with jury selection, court documents show. The takeover of the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge, which started on Jan. 2 with at least a dozen armed men, was the latest flare-up in a decades-old conflict over federal control of millions of acres of public land in the West. The protest was sparked in part by the return to prison of two Oregon ranchers convicted of setting fires that spread to federal property in the vicinity of the refuge. Jury selection was set to begin on Wednesday in a federal courthouse in Portland, with opening arguments likely to begin next week, a spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office said. REUTERS

THREE KILLED IN MIDAIR PLANE COLLISION IN GEORGIA

2 Three people were killed when two planes collided above a regional airport in Georgia on Wednesday, a fire official said. The crash occurred near the West Georgia Regional Airport in Carroll County, about 40 miles southwest of Atlanta, said a county fire department employee who did not give her name. The spokeswoman could not say what types of planes were involved in the collision or the exact time of the incident. Fire officials were on the scene investigating, she said. It was not immediately clear if anyone survived the crash or what caused it. Live video of the airport posted online by WSB-TV at about noon local time showed what appeared to be a smashed single-engine aircraft lying on a large lawn or runway. A second aircraft was not shown. REUTERS

HOUSE REPUBLICANS TO DISCUSS WHETHER TO IMPEACH IRS CHIEF

3 House of Representatives Republicans will hold a special conference next week to discuss whether the nation's top tax collector, Internal Revenue Service Commissioner John Koskinen, should be impeached, House Speaker Paul Ryan said on Wednesday. "This is something that we're going to have a planning conference on next week and we're going to discuss among our members, and the members are going to vote the way they want to vote on this," Ryan told reporters. House conservatives are pushing for impeachment, saying Koskinen failed to comply with a congressional investigation into IRS actions applying extra scrutiny to conservative groups' applications for tax exempt status between 2010 and 2012. Harvard University's incoming class: straight-laced ivy leaguers

The Harvard Crimson surveyed the Class of 2020, and here's what they found out.

CANDID CAMPUS

Metro's look inside Boston's college campuses

As classes begin this week at Harvard University, the incoming Class of 2020 might be described as liberal, non-religious virgins who have tried alcohol but shunned marijuana.

Those are a few of the common traits of this year's freshman class at the Ivy League school as measured by the school's annual "Class of" survey.

Each year, The Harvard Crimson campus newspaper sends out an email survey to the school's incoming students. The survey covers such topics as drug habits, family incomes and demographic makeup of the United States' oldest institution of higher learning.

This year, 1,209 out of the 1,657 incoming students responded to questions about their academic careers, religions, politics and more, detailing what 73 percent of the class of 2020 is like.

For starters, the class is pretty evenly split when it comes to gender, with 50.2 percent male, 49.3 percent female and 0.5 percent identifying as "other."

Incoming students are mostly white — though the 55.7 of respondents who identify as white is a slight decrease from the 58.2 percent in the Class of 2019 survey. Other ethnicities saw an uptick in their representation, with 26.6 percent identifying as Asian, 11.4 percent as black or African-American and 13.1 percent as Hispanic or Latino (compared with 23.5 percent, 11.2 percent and 12.5 percent respectively for the class of 2019).

A majority of the freshman class may be familiar with New England's ways as nearly 40 percent of them are from the Northeast. The Southwest sent the least amount of incoming students, with less than 7 percent of respondents saying they're from that area.

Harvard freshmen seem to be good students, not just in academics but in morals: More than 90 percent of respondents said that they have never cheated on an exam. Also, more than two-thirds said that they have never tried marijuana, and nearly 80 percent said they do not own a fake ID. However, roughly 60 percent of respondents said they have tried alcohol.

What about harder drugs? A surprising 5 percent reported that they've tried psychedelic mushrooms, the largest percentage in the last four years. The Class of 2019 survey showed that that year's freshmen had mostly tried "study drugs," with less than 5 percent reporting so, when it came to trying something harder than weed.

The Crimson also poked into incoming students' sex lives and found out that more than 60 percent reported being virgins. They discovered a disturbing statistic as well: More than 76 percent of incoming women are worried about sexual assault at Harvard (along with 14 percent of men).

That concern may come on the heels of an incident last year when a student who had claimed that she was sexually assaulted and then harassed said that the school "refused to act." Harvard has since reinforced its efforts to prevent on-campus sexual assault with a set of recommendations from a university-wide task force and the hiring of a new administrator to head prevention training.

The Class of 2020 survey ends with data on the students' technology use, and though Facebook creator Mark Zuckerberg conceived the social media site while on campus, the majority of incoming students don't seem to be obsessed with it: More than a quarter of respondents said they spend 15 minutes or less a day on Facebook. Boston landmarks to light up orange for Hunger Action Day

The Greater Boston Food Bank on Bay Avenue. DEREK KOUYOUMJIAN

The Greater Boston Food Bank is participating in a campaign to bring attention to food insecurity.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Do you know where your next meal is coming from?

One in nine Eastern Massachusetts residents don't, according to Catherine D'Amato, the president and CEO of the Greater Boston Food Bank (GBFB). The GBFB provides food to about 90,000 people each week, and for one day on Thursday, the city will change the look of its skyline to support the cause.

Hunger Action Day, Sept. 8, is an awareness campaign and part of the larger Hunger Action Month by the U.S. hunger-relief organization Feeding America and its network of 200 food banks across the country, including the GBFB.

When you look at Boston's skyline Thursday night, you'll see the Prudential Center, Zakim Bridge and TD Garden illuminated in orange, the official color of the campaign, for a "Flip the Switch" ceremony with Gov. Charlie Baker to bring the issue to light.

"Most of the general public is not aware that hunger is of epidemic proportions in the U.S.," D'Amato said. "Hunger is not necessarily something we talk about. It's much more of a hidden issue, much more of a silent issue."

The GBFB is the largest hunger-relief organization in New England, providing food to more than 190 cities and towns throughout Eastern Massachusetts. But even though thousands of people use these resources, the topic of hunger—which D'Amato calls a public health issue — still rarely comes up in public conversation.

"It's different than a chronic disease. Most people have a personal story of losing a relative to an issue such as cancer," she said. "No one is going to say, 'Hey, I sent my kid to school without breakfast.' People may be touched by hunger but they won't talk about it."

D'Amato said that people may not share their stories of experiencing "food insecurity" for many reasons: There's a sense of shame and embarrassment, a connotation that they've failed to provide for their family or that they don't make enough money. And food insecurity can affect everyone and anyone, she said.

"I've seen people who have a Ph.D. and go to a food pantry," she said. "They think, 'How can I talk about that?'"

D'Amato hopes citizens can be inspired by the campaign to get involved with their local food pantry, talk to local legislature and just ask their friends, family and neighbors, "Do you have enough to eat?"

"There is an assumption that we live in a well-educated area, that everybody has a home, a college degree, a place to go, a supportive family, and that no one is hungry," she said. "That's not the case."

Raising a family? Boston might not be the best place to live

Many Northeast cities were ranked low for family-friendliness by a personal finance website.

CRISTABELLE TUMOLA
@CristabelleT
cristabelle.tumola@metro.us

When it's time to raise a family, many couples think about moving to a smaller, less populated town outside of a large city, but some want to stay in an urban setting — seeing the advantages that it has to offer their future children.

Boston isn't one of the more family-friendly cities in the nation, according to WalletHub, a personal finance website.

WalletHub "compared the 150 most populated U.S. cities based on 36 key metrics that take into account essential family dynamics such as the relative cost of housing, the quality of local school and health care systems and the opportunities for fun and recreation" to see what the best and worst urban locations were for families.

The results found that none of the top 50 cities included Northeast locations — with many cities in that region trending toward the bottom, including New York City and Philadelphia.

WalletHub specifically ranked cities across five key dimensions: family fun; health and safety; education and child care; affordability; and socio-economic environment.

The top cities in the ranking were Overland Park, Kansas; Madison, Wisconsin; Plano, Texas; Sioux Falls, South Dakota; and Virginia Beach, Virginia. Plano, for example, ranked No. 1 for most affordable housing, and Overland Park had the lowest percentage of families who were below the poverty level.

Finances seemed to have a large impact in the rankings, as New York City was unsurprisingly No. 1 for attractions, but ranked last for lowest median family salary (adjusted for cost of living).

New York City, which ranked 115 overall, was at 37 for health and safety, but in the 70s for family fun and education and child care. Its big-city neighbor to the south, Philadelphia, also ranked low for affordability and other factors, coming in at 123.

Boston, however, fared better at No. 53, with its high education and child care rating of 5.

"Young families should carefully review their lifestyle and assess their current resources, and then prioritize their preferences accordingly," said Soyeon Park, associate professor in the Department of Child and Adolescent Development at San Francisco State University.

"Not all families have the sufficient wherewithal to buy a large single-family house with a spacious backyard, hire a 24-hour nanny, send the child to a private school and shop daily at pricey organic grocery stores. For some families, enjoying outdoor recreational activities together on weekends is crucial, but for others it may be more important to find easy access to multiple child care arrangements as both parents work full-time with nontraditional hours. Long-term financial planning based on individual needs is key to successfully managing a budget, especially when couples have young children or plan to have children in the near future."

Apple unveils water-resistant iPhone 7

Apple senior vice president of worldwide marketing Phil Schiller speaks on the new Apple iPhone 7 during a launch event on Wednesday in San Francisco, California. GETTY IMAGES

The new phone will start shipping in major markets, including the United States and China, on Sept. 16.

Apple Inc. unveiled its new water- and dust-resistant iPhone 7 with high-resolution cameras at its fall product event on Wednesday, and said a Super Mario game was coming to the new phone and Pokemon Go would feature on its upgraded Apple Watch.

The excitement at the Bill Graham auditorium in San Francisco was not matched on Wall Street as Apple's stock spent most of the session in negative territory before briefly showing small gains.

However, Nintendo's U.S.-listed shares jumped more than 20 percent to trade around $35 after it announced a new smartphone game in the venerable Super Mario Bros. series, Super Mario Run, which will debut in December on the iPhone and iPad.

The world's best-known technology company said the iPhone 7, starting at $649, would have one, zooming 12-megapixel camera. The "Plus" edition, starting at $769, would feature two cameras.

It also removed the analog headphone jack, as was widely expected. The new headphones supplied by Apple with the phone will plug into the same port as the recharging cord, but it will also work with Apple's new wireless headphones, called Air Pods, available in late October at a price of $159.

"While the camera improvements for the iPhone 7 Plus are nice, they are incremental for most and the lack of headphone jacks could offset that for others," said Bob O'Donnell of research firm TECHnalysis.

He said Apple's new glossy black finish could be more popular than any tech feature, reflecting the slowdown in major tech innovations for smartphones.

Mike Binger, senior portfolio manager at Gradient Investments LLC in Minneapolis, said the disappearance of the headphone jack "will probably annoy a certain amount of people" but they would likely get over it.

"Every other release tends to be a better release. Most people's two-year contracts are nearing the end, so I think the iPhone 7, just from a replacement basis, will be a successful launch," he said. "We're in good shape for a nice sales cycle here, so I'm encouraged."

Apple typically gives its main product, which accounts for more than half of its revenue, a big makeover every other year and the last major redesign was the iPhone 6 in 2014.

Apple said its Apple Watch Series 2, with a swim-proof casing, will be available in more than 25 countries starting on Sept. 16.

"I predict Watch sales will improve dramatically," said Tech analyst Patrick Moorhead. "Most of the current Watch owners are early adopters and the next wave could be 10 times the size of that market."

Apple also launched a new version of the device called the Apple Watch Nike+, in partnership with the athletic goods manufacturer Nike Inc., featuring GPS so athletes can track their runs.

Shares of Fitbit Inc., which makes activity-tracking bands, fell 2 percent on the emergence of such a high-profile competitor. REUTERS

Study: Thanksgiving flight bookings to Miami fall amid Zika concerns

Bookings for the Thanksgiving period from solo travelers and small family-like groups of two to four members fell the most, the study found.

Carlos Varas, a Miami-Dade County mosquito control inspector, uses a Golden Eagle blower to spray pesticide to kill mosquitos in the Miami Beach neighborhood as the county fights to control the Zika virus outbreak. GETTY IMAGES

Flight bookings to Miami for the Thanksgiving holiday in November dropped after the Zika virus was detected in the Wynwood area in the popular tourist destination, travel data analysis company ForwardKeys said.

Flight bookings were down 10 percent as of Aug. 27, after being up 11 percent as of Aug. 19, the day Florida confirmed that the mosquito-borne Zika virus was active in Miami, according to the report.

According to the ForwardKeys study, trips with Miami as the sole destination were strongly affected, whereas there was no impact on bookings for trips that included the city and other destinations.

There was little impact on flight bookings for September, October and Christmas, the report found.

American Airlines Group Inc., the largest carrier in Miami, and rival JetBlue Airways Corp., were not immediately available for comment.

Leisure airfares to the greater Miami area have inched down while fewer hotel rooms have been booked in downtown Miami in the weeks since the Zika virus was detected there, Reuters reported last month.

Last month, Florida announced four new cases of Zika in the Wynwood neighborhood, where officials have been aggressively spraying for the mosquitoes that carry the virus for weeks.

The current Zika outbreak was first detected in Brazil last year and has since spread across the Americas, Singapore and Malaysia. In Brazil, Zika has been linked to more than 1,800 cases of microcephaly, and U.S. officials expect as many as 270 cases in Puerto Rico, where local transmission of the virus is widespread. REUTERS

US officials: Russian jet came within 10 feet of US spy plane

A Russian fighter jet carried out an "unsafe and unprofessional" intercept of a U.S. spy plane flying a regular patrol over the Black Sea, coming within 10 feet of the American aircraft, two U.S. defense officials told Reuters on Wednesday.

The incident comes at a time of increased tensions between the United States and Russia, who are on opposing sides of the Syrian civil war.

One official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the incident lasted about 19 minutes and the Russian Sukhoi Su-27 fighter came within 10 feet of the U.S. Navy P-8 surveillance plane.

"They're up there for 12 hours and there are lots of interactions. But only one of the incidents was what the pilot determined was unsafe," said another official, who was not authorized to speak publicly.

Officials were now talking with the pilot and reviewing the incident to determine whether it would be included in the annual meeting of U.S. and Russian officials about more serious intercepts, the official added. REUTERS

Ferguson protest leader found shot dead in burning car

Protest leader Darren Seals, 29, was found dead in a burning car in the village of Riverview, about five miles east of Ferguson, early Tuesday, police said.

Darren Seals FACEBOOK

Missouri detectives have not determined a motive or identified any witnesses in an investigation into the death of a man who led protests in the city of Ferguson following the fatal 2014 shooting of Michael Brown by a law enforcement officer, police said on Wednesday.

Ferguson, a St. Louis suburb, gained national attention because of rioting after the August 2014 shooting of Brown, an unarmed black 18-year-old, by white police officer Darren Wilson. Most protests were peaceful, but violence erupted again when a grand jury decided not to bring charges against Wilson.

A federal investigation later found patterns of racial discrimination by Ferguson police.

The demonstrations helped to coalesce the civil rights movement Black Lives Matter.

"I don't recall anyone having a longer protest, a more productive protest, a more creative protest than what we did," Seals said in an interview with MTV released in November 2014. "I don't think people will ever really appreciate what we did until years from now."

Hours before Seals' death, he posted on Twitter about Colin Kaepernick, a San Francisco 49ers quarterback who protested racial injustice and police brutality by declining to stand for the national anthem, and the presidential election. In his Twitter profile, Seals described himself as a "businessman, revolutionary, activist, unapologetically BLACK, Afrikan in AmeriKKKa, fighter, leader."

Police have not determined a motive for the crime or identified any witnesses, Sgt. Shawn McGuire said. McGuire declined to say in which part of Seals' body he was shot.

County police said officers were first called to investigate a burning vehicle in Riverview. "When the fire was extinguished, a deceased male subject was located inside of the vehicle," the department said in a statement.

Seals, whose last-known address was in St. Louis, was identified as the victim. REUTERS

Appeals court deals setback to Uber drivers' cases

A U.S. appeals court on Wednesday shifted most of a lawsuit challenging background checks performed by Uber Technologies Inc. on its drivers to arbitration, a ruling likely to affect a larger case over whether they should be considered employees or independent contractors.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco said agreements signed by the two former drivers who filed a proposed class action lawsuit over background checks "clearly and unmistakably" required a private arbitrator, not a federal judge, to decide whether the claims should be kept out of court.

The decision could also limit the scope of a separate class action that had involved 385,000 drivers in California and Massachusetts. Those drivers said they were employees entitled to reimbursement for expenses like gas and vehicle maintenance.

An Uber appeal of class certification in the expenses case is currently pending. However, the appeals court's decision to uphold the arbitration agreements in the background check case will probably mean that only the drivers who opted out of them, a fraction of the 385,000-member class, can pursue the expense reimbursement claims.

"This decision is not good for the class," said Shannon Liss-Riordan, a lawyer representing drivers in the expenses lawsuit.

Uber lawyer Theodore Boutrous applauded the decision. "Arbitration is a fair, speedy and less costly alternative to class-action litigation," he said in a statement. REUTERS

Trending at Fashion Week

From see-now-buy-now to Instagram Stories, we've got all the talking points you need for the spring 2017 show season. NICOLE HUNTER

A major Tommy Hilfiger x Gigi Hadid happening is happening

Last season, Yeezy provided the big celebrity kickoff to New York Fashion Week. This go 'round it's going to be all about Gigi. On Friday, Tommy Hilfiger will debut its capsule collection with Insta-model Gigi Hadid and it's got all the talking points:

1. The collection will be see-now-buy-now (you'll be hearing that phrase a lot this week), with the brand releasing the clothes in stores immediately after the show.
2. The show will have an extravagant carnival theme — it will literally be one giant fashion party, complete with ferris wheel and arcade games at Pier 16 at South Street Seaport.
3. If you can't manage to get your hands on tickets, stream it live this Friday on Tommy.com
4. Did we mention it's open to the public? The following day, Sept. 10, from noon to 9 p.m., the pier will be open to consumers who will be able to shop the new collection. Gigi Hadid will also be making a special appearance that day.

Snapchat or Stories?

Around this time of year, the fashion media loves to publish lists of influencers to follow on social media. Chances are you've seen them; the lists are always the same, but the social media channels and terminology tend to change with the times. Ten years ago it was the "Bloggers to Follow on Twitter." Five years ago it was the "Street Style Muses to Stalk on Instagram." Last year, "The Social Media Stars to Befriend on Snapchat." And this season? Instagram Stories. The Facebook-owned photo-sharing app already reigns as fashion's most-beloved social network. And now with Stories, models, editors and social-media types can overshare those catwalk moments to their heart's content. Expect to be drowning in BTS video clips and hand-drawn doodles.

A homecoming at Oscar de la Renta

This is the season of designer musical chairs. Some of the big changes include Raf Simons at Calvin Klein and Valentino's Maria Grazia Chiuri at Christian Dior, the first woman to helm the storied French fashion house. And this week it was finally announced that Laura Kim and Fernando Garcia, the designers behind hot partywear line Monse, will take over as co-creative directors at Oscar de la Renta, replacing Peter Copping. Why this is extra special: Kim and Garcia got their start at ODLR, where Kim served as design director for more than a decade. While the duo won't officially show until next season, the excitement for their debut is already building.

Yeezy 4! Yeezy 4!

It isn't Fashion Week without a Kanye West headline, and this season there are bound to be a few. First, there was his Life of Pablo tour, which took Madison Square Garden by storm Sept. 5 and 6, days before NYFW officially kicked off. Second, Yeezy 4 landed in a suitably grand fashion the following day. After the rapper stirred up controversy with his model-casting tweet seeking "multiracial women only," he shuttled people to a secret spot on Roosevelt Island for his show, which featured a performance from the artist Vanessa Beecroft. Attendees waited for hours without water or bathrooms. West's models finally emerged, in over the knee boots and hoodies in his signature nude. Earlier, West told Vogue.com he was inspired by his family and life in Calabasas, California. Go figure.

Pamela Adlon is just getting to the good stuff. Known for leading roles on "Louie" and "Californication" and her voice work as Bobby in "King of the Hill," the sassy, raspy-voiced actor now has her own show that she writes, produces and stars in. "Better Things," a new 30-minute comedy Adlon co-created with Louis C.K., is a semi-autobiographical series about Sam Fox, a working actor in L.A. who's also raising three daughters on her own (like Adlon).

The show depicts Fox navigating the day-to-day ups-and-downs of being a working mom with a laugh and a shrug. In the world of "Better Things," it seems, adulthood is about making it up as you go.

"I always felt like the log line for my show could be, 'Life is what happens to you when you're too busy to make any other plans,'" she says. "You have to make room for things that are unexpected all the time. You just can't plan."

We spoke with Adlon in advance of the "Better Things" premiere, which is Thursday, Sept. 8 on FX.

When you were writing the show, what was the balance of using your own life for material and creating anew?

I definitely had to look inward and tap into the Rolodex of stories I've been hoarding. I've been looking at my life in an observational way for so long, and then as I brought in these other actors, everything just became more fleshed out. As I was doing each episode, I was finding [Sam's] voice. I didn't really think, "Oh this is how I'm going to be as Sam Fox," or whatever. It just became more and more clear as I was doing the show.

She's definitely kind of like me, 2.0. She's much more, I guess, volatile. Things that are dormant in me or characteristics that I don't have came to the surface with Sam. She's more extreme than I am.

How did your experience on "Louie" influence you?

My association and collaboration on that show definitely helped form "Better Things." You know, I'm the daughter of a writer, but I learned so much about writing from "Louie," it's astonishing. And certainly I built muscles making my show that I didn't even know that I had.

GETTY IMAGES

You were born in Manhattan, but you grew up bicoastal. What is your relationship with New York and L.A.?

California has been an amazing place to raise my daughters. When I was young and I was being shuttled back and forth between New York and L.A., I kind of didn't fit in anywhere, and I just wanted to always go back to New York. And then as I became an adult, I decided I didn't want to have that mindset, I wanted to be happy where I was. And so I got very grounded in L.A. and put my roots down here with my girls, who are very much California girls.

The poster is getting a lot of attention.

That was marketing's concept. And I said, "Great, I'm all for that," as opposed to having my face be on a bus or a billboard and my kids and I having to drive past it. I much prefer my ass showing than my face.

Everywhere we want to eat this fall

From familiar faces to second chances, the coming months are looking delicious. RACHEL RACZKA

Mida will focus on handmade pastas and bold flavor combos. JOSE LUIS MARTINEZ:

Treat yo'self

Mida

Opening midfall

With a name that translates to "he gives me" in Italian, chef Douglass Williams takes on the former location of Cluckit!, nee Estelle's, in the South End. The Coppa alumnus brings global influence to the menu that will straddle fine dining and casual cultural comforts with a focus on Italian cuisine. We're told handmade pastas and the feelings evoked by the words "charred, spicy, crunchy and crispy" inspired the menu. Vague, but we're already hungry for more. 782 Tremont St., midaboston.com

Waypoint

Open now

Chef Michael Scelfo struck gold with his eclectic small plates at Alden & Harlow, so he announced he'd be opening a second Harvard Square hot spot with Waypoint. This time, Scelfo dives into seafood, focusing on innovative twists and quirky updates to favorites, like smoked whitefish pizza with marscapone and crispy capers, fried smelts with pickled ramp remoulade or razor clam cakes with bacon-fat aioli. A new late-night menu boasts bumps of caviar with doughnut holes and buttermilk crema and oyster shooters with cucumber-fennel vodka. 1030 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge,waypoint harvard.com

RFK Kitchen

Opening September

Chef Rachel Klein was known for her epic rotisserie — by far the finest piece of work in Liquid Art House — in her role at Back Bay restaurant. But now she's on her own, bringing her succulent roast chicken know-how to this soon-to-be-open locally sourced New American Needham locale. Self-described as "approachable," Klein invites her patrons to perch at the centrally located kitchen-facing counter for the best seat in the house. 948 Great Plain Ave., Needham, rfk-kitchen.com

Buttermilk and Bourbon

Opening mid-November

If you need a hefty dose of modern Southern comfort, blue-haired chef Jason Santos will certainly deliver. The Back Bay restaurant plans to serve twists of traditional down-home cooking, including boiled-peanut hummus served with benne seed crackers and golden-raisin compote, peel-and-eat shrimp poached in lemon shady and boneless fried chicken wings, served Nashville hot.

Yo! Sushi

Opening October

Conveyor-belt sushi (or a kaiten concept) has been in motion for decades, but the trend has only recently started making moves on U.S. soil. Yo! Sushi, which has been rolling stateside since 2015, will settle in a 2,225-square-foot location in our new favorite noshing neighborhood, the Seaport, with four-piece rolls, poke, katsu and noodles that shimmy to your table straight from the kitchen. Each menu item comes in a priced-by-color plate — starting at $3 in green to $7 in yellow — so you can keep track of your final bill as you munch on. 79 Seaport Blvd., yosushiusa.com space in the Charles Hotel. The second Italian restaurant from the owner of beloved rustic pasta joint Giulia is hotly anticipated. The coming attraction will focus on the broad-spanning regional Italian cuisine — think cured meats and delectable carbs of all stripes — with a 220-seat space designed by Bentel & Bentel, which has crafted the memorable dining interiors of B&G Oysters and Le Bernardin. 1 Bennett St., Cambridge, charleshotel.com

Blue Room

Open now
Call it a triumphant return. The Blue Room reopened its doors Sept. 1 following a building fire that caused substantial smoke and water damage to the Kendall Square mainstay and its neighbors. Now, a year later, there's plenty to celebrate — including a refreshed menu and crisp, contemporary interiors. On your plate this time: grilled cauliflower with heirloom tomatoes and eggplant tahini, braised rabbit pozole and thick tagliatelle topped with crab and chili pesto and bottaga — a salty Italian roe delicacy. 1 Kendall Square, Cambridge, theblueroom.net

Island Creek Oyster Bar Burlington

Opening October
There's no better place to impress an out-of-towner than Kenmore's Island Creek Oyster Bar — just make sure to book a reservation weeks in advance or you'll be totally shucked. (Sorry.) But, wait — the restaurant expands to parent-friendly Burlington with a patio and weekday lunch options, offering its signature locally sourced raw bar and sophisticated seafood — so fresh, so clean you can practically hear the ocean. 300 District Ave., Burlington, islandcreekoysterbar.com

Opening November/December
If you're looking for a new healthful(ish) lunchtime alternative, expect to find all the pretty young things and their Snapchat stories at this New York fast-casual import. The plant-based vegan restaurant will dig roots in the Seaport late fall (with a Fenway location also on the way) and offer wholesome renditions of your favorite takeaway creations — think quinoa taco salad with seitan chorizo and agave-lime lime vinaigrette and tempeh-lentil-chia-walnut burgers with beet ketchup and special sauce. 101 Seaport Blvd., bychefchloe.com

Eataly

Opening November
Mario Batali got his Boston Crocs wet with the Seaport's Babbo Pizzeria, but it was just the beginning of the B&B empire he hoped to create. The mammoth three-story, 45,000 square-foot Italian emporium will reside within the newly expanded Boylston-side Prudential Center. Inside, you can find every pasta known to mankind, enough tinned tomatoes to generate a radio signal and charcuterie selections to fulfill your wildest dreams, alongside locally sourced produce and products handpicked by Batali's Eataly crew. It may be more retailer than traditional restaurant, but we just dare you to walk out the door without packing your pantry. 800 Boylston St., eataly.com

EAT LIKE AN INSIDER

The Georgia native shares his favorite spots around town. LAUREN O'NEIL

Chef Brian Poe is one busy man about town. As the owner of downtown's Tip Tap Room, Inman's Bukowski Tavern and Back Bay's Poe's Kitchen at the Rattlesnake, the 43-year-old industry veteran doesn't have a ton of downtime — but when he does, he knows how and where to eat.

Best late-night meal?
Peach Farm is always, always, always a great go-to. And I know I've mentioned it a lot lately, but I just can't get over how good the food was on my last visit to Tavern Road. It's just perfectly sized, perfect late-night food. Peach Farm, 4 Tyler St., peachfarmboston.com; Tavern Road, 343 Congress St., tavernroad.com

Best place to dine alone?
Butcher Shop in the South End; I love that whole little corner. I park on Waltham Street, stop into Stir and buy a book — the best little bookstore in Boston, in my humble opinion — grab some bread and vegetables from Sienna Farms and then cozy up to the bar for a really good glass of wine and a snack from the menu. It takes you away for a while and it's the best spot to take a break from the day. 552 Tremont St., thebutchershopboston.com

Place you recommend for out-of-towners?
Scampo — if there's three chefs you need to introduce to an out-of-towner or new person to Boston's culinary scene, it's Lydia [Shire], Simon [Restrepo] and Alex [Pineda]. Scampo, The Liberty Hotel, 215 Charles St., scampoboston.com

Most Instagrammable dish in town?

Triple threat

Joey Bada$$ is more than just a major MC. DEE FROSTED

You know Joey Bada$$.

CANDACE MCDUFFIE
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

There is no containing the chaos that is inherent with Joey Bada$$. The 21-year-old Brooklyn-born rapper has managed to turn his music career into a riveting reign over multiple facets of pop culture. That havoc bleeds into our brief phone conversation — the rapper (born Jo-Vaughn Virginie Scott) is pressed between ending his European tour the day before starting his American one alongside Top Dawg Entertainment luminary Schoolboy Q.

As he takes a break on the set of a video shoot, he explains that nerves are a thing of the past. "I don't get nervous anymore over touring, really," he says. "At this point, it'd be pretty weird. Right before I get onstage, I do a little, but I've gotten used to it. When I was asked to tour with Schoolboy, I was like 'Hell yeah!'"

Known for his '90s-inspired hooks and more so present-day social commentary, his chill performance demeanor can also be applied to his songwriting process. "Different days, different moods, different vibes, different methods," he explains. "Sometimes I write, sometimes I don't write. But I go with the flow and I never force anything." The organic nature of his debut studio album, "B4. Da.$$," is conspicuous between bars; the emotion he places behind each song is hard to execute but comes naturally to the MC.

Likewise, his foray into acting was just as seamless. His role as Leon on USA Network's Golden Globe-winning series "Mr. Robot" turned out to be an extension of who he really is. "Leon was an easy role for me to nail because we have so much in common," the rapper says. "He's mysterious, I'm mysterious. He's a talkative dude, I'm a talkative dude. I'm trying to make an impact and progress in all areas, whether it's music or acting, if that makes any sense. I just want to act more, period."

If dark dystopian drama isn't your thing, you may have also spotted him as one of the famous faces in Calvin Klein's spring 2016 jeans campaign. "Fashion is something you get into but style is something that you're born with, and I've always been a stylish dude," he adds. "If I like something, I don't look at the brand. I look at the piece to see if it reflects my character, you know, who I am."

When asked if he's trying to diversify the entertainment industry with all of his undertakings, he asks me to repeat the question to allow it to sink in. "No, it's bigger than that," he pensively responds. "I'm trying to diversify the world."

THEATER

Local director Spiro Veloudos tackles Stephen Sondheim's "Company" for the first time in this production from Lyric Stage Company. The Tony-sweeping 1970 musical was groundbreaking in its honest depiction of modern love, centering on commitment-phobic Bobby, struggling to choose between three girlfriends and to assess the varying examples of his married friends. In the age of Tinder, it only seems more relevant.

"One More Time With Feeling"

Andrew Dominik directed this documentary on the writing and recording of Australian rock singer-songwriter Nick Cave's latest album, "Skeleton Tree," to be released Friday. But this isn't the typical music doc. During this time, Cave's 15-year-old son died in a mysterious accident, and the film became a document of an artist struggling to create in the midst of a profound loss.

"Marjorie Prime"

This sci-fi play, a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize, imagines a world in which a patient in the early stages of Alzheimer's can order a facsimile of her long-gone husband (or whomever she wants) to refresh her declining memory. He's not a clone or an android. He's described only as a "prime," and he's ready to suit her desire — but that might just be the problem.

Allston's Awesome Christmas

"Allston Christmas" is, of course, the ironic term for the chaotic first day of September, when all the new college students move in to those long-suffering apartments of Allston. This three-day festival is a reminder that, rent hikes notwithstanding, Allston is still Boston's "Rock City." Dozens of local bands are participating, with the legendary Blake Babies headlining Saturday's free show at Pop Allston.

Visionaries

555 Gallery presents the work of three photographers, Walter Crump, Cynthia Katz and Smith Eliot, plus sculpture from Joe Caruso. Whether any or all of them are visionaries is up to history, but the work of all is compelling. Our favorites: Caruso's eccentric totems of a seemingly post-apocalyptic society, and Smith Eliot's troubling critique of feminine beauty, which makes us rethink our own visions.

Paul Endres Jr.: "The L#ST B#YS"

This set of paintings is the latest in Endres' series "The American Burden," imagining the fallout from a catastrophic near-future event in which all history is lost. Sounds quite grim, but it's also a humorous, surreal, doughnut-laden meltdown of popular culture. Think "Mad Max" in a wrecked Boston, and you're getting close, but Endres' vision is finally his own.

Great fall getaways

Vacation season isn't over yet.

Fodor's Travel

Fall is a magical time to travel almost everywhere, with mild temperatures and fewer crowds.

Philippines

Friendly, welcoming and primarily English-speaking, the Philippines offer a unique mix of indigenous and European cultures in Southeast Asia. Beyond the frenetic bustle of Manila, more than 7,000 islands offer an endless variety of beach experiences, from commercial resorts to private island retreats.

Minneapolis

The North Loop of Minneapolis spreads out along the Mississippi River within the city's Warehouse Historic District. Like Berlin, Brooklyn or New Orleans' Bywater District, this Twin Cities enclave has witnessed a slow but steady rebirth as artists and business owners have moved into once-derelict warehouses and set up shop, restoring lofts and opening stylish boutiques and notable farm-to-table restaurants.

Ecuador

This vibrant South American nation is so much more than a gateway to the Galapagos. Ecuador is small enough that visitors can go whale-watching, hiking and museum-hopping all in one trip. Quito — the highest capital city in the world, at 9,350 feet — is home to 500-year-old plazas, one of the highest aerial lifts in the world and New Andean cuisine.

Munich
GETTY IMAGES

Munich

This year, Germany commemorates the 500th anniversary of the Reinheitsgebot (Beer Purity Law), the 1516 legislation that dictated how Bavarian beer could be made. Accordingly, Munich, the state's capital, will host a more-festive-than-usual Oktoberfest (Sept. 17-Oct. 3) that will certainly draw larger-than-normal crowds. Beyond the beer steins, Munich charms visitors with its elaborate gardens, outstanding museums and palaces.

Utah

Home to both desert and mountains, Utah is the place to get outdoors this fall. With the historic creation of Park City, the largest ski and snowboard resort in the country with more than 7,300 skiable acres and 300 trails, there's no better time to experience Utah's famous powder. Not a skier? No problem. Hiking the red-rock canyons of the "Mighty Five" parks — Zion, Bryce Canyon, Arches, Capitol Reef and Canyonlands — may change your life.

Haiti

The island nation's vibrant culture and people beckon intrepid travelers as tourism quietly rebounds following its devastating earthquake. Visitors who make the trip will discover a rare kind of Caribbean tourism — one that's not about relaxing on palm-lined beaches (although that is doable here) but about stirring the soul. Haiti's rich history, colorful art, voodoo folklore and jaw-dropping natural beauty create a heady mix unlike anywhere else.

Abu Dhabi

The capital of the United Arab Emirates offers luxury, adventure and, soon, three major cultural institutions. This opulent city on the Persian Gulf is on the cusp of becoming the Middle East's fine-arts darling, with the Louvre Abu Dhabi opening in late 2016, in a striking building designed by Jean Nouvel, and the new Guggenheim in early 2017. The city is only a stone's throw from the epic Empty Quarter, the largest contiguous sand desert in the world, where adventurous types can go dune bashing and sand boarding.

Stay at the Qasr al Sarab resort, at the edge of the Empty Quarter in the United Arab Emirates. GETTY IMAGES

Palm Springs

The mod California desert oasis was beloved by Golden Age stars (Marilyn Monroe was discovered poolside here in the 1940s). These days, you'll find hip, modern-day Angelenos, for a good reason: Its 350 days of sunshine (a dry heat at that) create the ideal climate for golfing on dozens of area courses or lounging by the pool at glamorous hotels with pampering services.

NFL preview: Division winners, Super Bowl pick

Here are our picks. Let us know how wrong we are.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

The NFL landscape will likely look a lot different by season's end.

When things kick off with Week 1 Thursday night — and later Sunday afternoon, several top contenders like the Patriots and Steelers will be without their top players.

Over the course of a 16-game season, the cream will rise to the top. Here's a look at how we think things will pan out this year in each division, and in January/February:

NFC East

Giants

The Giants sort of get the pick by default, but the level of competition is the thinnest of any division. Philadelphia boasts one of the NFL's most improved defenses, but will likely be held back by the learning process that will be Carson Wentz' rookie season. Washington is the defending division champ, but will need the run game to be just as good as it was last year, without Alfred Morris. The Cowboys have a rookie quarterback (Dak Prescott playing in place of injured Tony Romo) and an explosive but still rookie running back.

NFC North

Packers

This pick is not as hard to make as the East was. It really comes down to two teams, the Packers and Vikings, and each will likely make the playoffs with the Bears and Lions following behind. A healthy array of weapons for Aaron Rodgers and a decent defense gives the Packers the edge. Minnesota has a better defense — and rushing champ Adrian Pederson — but Sam Bradford's average quarterback play will hold the Vikings back.

NFC South

Panthers

The defending NFC champs lost Josh Norman but should be better on offense with Kelvin Benjamin and Devin Funchess acting as legitimate weapons for Cam Newton. The Falcons, Buccaneers and Saints each have outside shots at Wild Card berths, with Tampa boasting the highest ceiling should its young talent produce.

NFC West

Cardinals

This division will provide the NFC's other playoff Wild Card team in the Seahawks, but the Cardinals — last year's playoff shortcomings aside — have a complete and balanced offense led by David Johnson and Carson Palmer and a very good defense. Seattle has the same, but will finish just behind its rivals to the south after 16 games.

AFC East

Patriots

Jimmy Garoppolo will keep the Patriots afloat until Week 5 when the flood waters will unleash a fury on the NFL that could land Tom Brady an NFL MVP award in just 12 games. The Jets, looking to bank on a winning record last year, are favorites to make the playoffs as a Wild Card as the Dolphins and Bills meddle in mediocrity once again.

AFC North

Steelers

Similar to the Patriots' early season woes, Ben Roethlisberger will have to wait for Le'Veon Bell to hit the field after he serves his suspension. But once he does, Bell and Antonio Brown will lead the Pittsburgh offense to a division title. The Bengals will be a popular pick for a Wild Card position, especially if Andy Dalton can continue his high level of play from a season ago.

AFC South

Texans

Finally, a competitive division. The Texans, winners of the division last year, are favorites but only slightly. Andrew Luck has the chance with T.Y. Hilton and Donte Moncrief to piece together a comeback player of the year kind of season and lead the Colts to at least the playoffs if not the AFC South crown. The Jaguars are a year older, a year more experienced and a year more jam-packed with potential superstar talent, led by the wide receiving duo of Allen Robinson and Allen Hurns.

AFC West

Chiefs

Really, Kansas City gets the nod by default, as the potent Broncos defense was enough to carry an elderly Peyton Manning, but not rookie Trevor Siemian. The Raiders, much improved, will be contenders for a Wild Card spot if Derek Carr can surprise again, and even the Chargers have the chance to contend. This division is the most wide open.

Wild Cards

Jets, Colts, Vikings, Seahawks

Super Bowl Champions

Patriots over Cardinals

We think the wrath of Tom Brady, paired with much of the same team that has gone to five straight AFC title games (with a Super Bowl win in 2014), will lift New England to yet another championship season.

IT'S TIME FOR SOX RELIEVERS TO MAN UP

Fernando Abad will be a key piece of the Red Sox' bullpen down the stretch. GETTY IMAGES

@dannypicard

The standings won't show it, but the Boston Red Sox have issues.

Entering Wednesday's series finale in San Diego, the Sox stood tied with the Toronto Blue Jays for first place in the AL East, with the Baltimore Orioles one game behind them.

This isn't just a good place to be, it's a great place to be — in prime position to play postseason baseball for the first time since winning the World Series in 2013. And even if these current issues continue to haunt them, these Red Sox are still good enough to get into the tournament.

I'm a firm believer that, in most sports, all you have to do is get into the playoffs. Just get in, and you have a shot to catch fire and win it all. I don't necessarily feel that way about October baseball. It's a different beast. You need to have that check mark next to every aspect of the game in order for me to believe you have a shot to take it down.

Lately, the Red Sox have found some consistent starting pitching. Check. And the offense? Everybody knows just how good the Sox' offense is. Check. A dominant closer? Check. The team's biggest issue lies somewhere between the rotation and that closer, Craig Kimbrel — in save situations, of course.

Manager John Farrell has come under fire from fans and local media once again this season for allegedly pulling all the wrong strings and making all the wrong decisions, especially when it comes to the bullpen.

Farrell will be the first to tell you that he isn't perfect. Not this year. Not last year. Not in 2014. And not even while winning a championship in 2013. I've criticized him this year for sure, but not nearly as much as the majority in Boston. The area where I've criticized him most this season, though, has been the bullpen.

But most of his bullpen mismanagement came in April, May and early June. Fortunately, for his sake, the Red Sox survived all of that. But unfortunately, for the team's sake, they never fixed the issue.

Credit where credit's due. President of baseball operations Dave Dombrowski and general manager Mike Hazen tried. They acquired Carson Smith in the offseason, who was supposed to be the primary setup man until he went down with a season-ending injury. Then they acquired righty Brad Ziegler and lefty Fernando Abad at the trade deadline for some bullpen depth.

Still, here we are, in September, and the Red Sox are still trying to figure out who they can trust out of the bullpen in big spots before they hand the ball off to Kimbrel. That's where I stop pointing the finger at Farrell. For this is no longer a manager issue. This is an execution issue, and in some ways, a talent issue.

Whenever a Red Sox reliever crumbles on the mound, everyone screams at the manager. They wanted somebody else out there. He didn't give the ball to the right guy.

But at this point, Farrell has a better chance of finding a setup man he can trust by pulling names out of a hat in the dugout.

Koji Uehara's return from the disabled list could be the missing piece to the puzzle. He could turn out to be someone that Farrell can trust to hold a lead and hand the ball off to their closer. But so could Ziegler. So could Abad. So could Matt Barnes. So could Junichi Tazawa. So could Joe Kelly. So could Clay Buchholz. But again, it's September, and we're still talking about it. Which means that none of those guys have stepped up and none of them have assumed that role permanently.

This isn't on the manager. This is on those players. And it's time for somebody to man up, put their work boots on and prove that he can be trusted in big spots on a consistent basis. If not, this story won't have a happy ending.

Right now, the standings don't reveal the whole story. But if they don't fix the bullpen issues, their opponent in the postseason will certainly tell it for them.

Aries An opportunity will develop that will give you greater job security. Negotiating and signing contracts are favored. Positive changes are heading your way.

Taurus It's a good time to travel for business or educational purposes. A retreat will open your mind to a host of information that will help you reduce your stress.

Gemini You should put more energy into making personal gains, not into trying to change others. Focus on your appearance and physical fitness.

Cancer Don't take on someone else's responsibilities. It's not up to you to make other people look good. Do your best to get ahead by taking pride in what you do.

Leo Make a point to bring about positive change. Don't let the past hinder your advancement. You can't change what's already transpired.

Virgo Consider how to make your life easier. Give people who are placing demands on you something to occupy their time and keep them out of your hair.

Libra Take a chance and make a point to do things differently. What you discover will make a difference, not only to you, but to others with similar dilemmas.

Scorpio Refuse to take on too much. Honing in on what's most important will make a difference to the outcome of something you truly believe in.

Sagittarius Emotional matters will escalate if you cannot keep a secret. Offering information based only on hearsay will result in you being blamed for meddling.

Capricorn Ask for clarification if you aren't satisfied with the information you are given. If you stay on top of your personal business, positive results will unfold.

Aquarius A chance to show what you have to offer will be met with encouragement, but first you must take care of unfinished business.

Pisces When traveling or dealing with people who don't share your views, you are best off being protective of your personal information. EUGENIA LAST
